*Sponsored by the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine
Center for Continuing Education in the Health Sciences,
Department of Otolaryngology, and
Division of Pulmonary, Allergy and Critical Care Medicine*

Program Overview

Designed primarily for the primary care physician, internist, pulmonologist, allergist, otolaryngologist, and rhinologist, this course provides novel insights into advances in the modern care of patients with asthma, allergic rhinitis, chronic rhinosinusitis, immunodeficiency, cough, and urticaria. Internationally recognized faculty and staff will present new information on recently approved biologic therapies, thoughtful care of the allergic patient, as well as provide an interactive case-based panel to integrate concepts in the management of complex patients.

Target Audience

This course is designed primarily for the primary care physician, internist, pulmonologist, allergist, otolaryngologist, and rhinologist as an introduction or update in the practical clinical care of patients with allergic rhinitis, asthma, urticaria, and chronic rhinosinusitis with and without polyposis.

Learning Objectives

- Determine how to manage patients with complex upper and lower airway inflammation (allergic rhinitis, asthma, chronic rhinosinusitis) and devise treatment strategies including biologic therapies and/or functional endoscopic sinus surgery to appropriately selected patients.
- To be able to effectively utilize different methods of immunotherapy to treat allergic diseases including sublingual immunotherapy and subcutaneous immunotherapy strategies.
- Incorporate new algorithms to manage chronic rhinosinusitis with nasal polyps, asthma, urticaria, and immunodeficiency.
- Implement strategies to accurately diagnosis and manage patients with difficult-to-treat cough, vocal cord dysfunction, and modifiers of inflammation.

The American with Disabilities Act Information

Participation by all individuals is encouraged. Advance notification of any special needs will help us provide better service. Please notify us of your needs at least two weeks in advance of the program by emailing szablewskina@upmc.edu.
