Friday, October 20, 2023 ~ 48th Annual Magee Alumni Day

Overview

For this year's Magee Alumni Day program, we have an exciting line-up of speakers consisting of past and current faculty and former residents. The program will feature updates on clinical care over the entire age spectrum of our patients. We expect the program to present topics that pose challenging clinical, technical, ethical, and financial issues that today's OB/GYN often faces, whether in practice or in an academic career. The program features endowed lectures – the Cohen, McCall, OB/GYN Legacy, Katz Minimally Invasive Surgery, the Alan Kunschner Memorial and Dr. Steve N. Caritis lectures.

Target Audience

This program is focused on health care practitioners in obstetrics and gynecology as well as in other primary care specialties.

Objectives

- Review pelvic sidewall anatomy as it relates to accomplishing difficult cases.
- ◆ To understand the predictive and diagnostic capabilities of Placental Growth Factor and Soluble Flt-1 for preeclampsia and other placental syndromes, and to anticipate their introduction into U.S. clinical practice.
- Review twin gestation and complications that may occur from sharing a placenta.
- Understand aspects of gynecologic care in the pediatric/adolescent oncology patient, including fertility counseling, menstrual management, and post-treatment endocrine function.
- ◆ The lecture will expand the fund of knowledge of the HPV virus by examining the history of cervical cancer prevention.
